OUTLOOK

- Assess sociopolitical complexity of Coast Salish groups through defensive sites and practices
- Aim is to show how fortifications materially exhibit the tensions of Coast Salish sociopolitical organization, revealing a fluidity and flexibility of sociopolitical forms

NORTHWEST

COAST

COAST SALISH AREA

- LOCATION

- SW British Columbia, Canada
- NW Washington State, US

- PEOPLES

COAST SALISH SOCIAL STRUCTURE

- Not Egalitarian
[ranked or sometimes stratified]
- Household as primary sociopolitical unit
[autonomous economically; locally hierarchical]
- Villages as clusters of households
[not a coherent polity; decentralized in hierarchy]
- Affinal alliances with other households
[social networks with adjacent or distant households]

AFFINAL ALLIANCES

- ALLIANCES: Households intermarry with other households; potlatches held to highlight alliance.
- EXCHANGE: Sharing of resources & practices
- ALLIES IN DEFENSE: Protect shared resources and kin

CHARACTERIZATIONS OF COAST SALISH LOCAL GROUP AUTONOMY

| Category | Characterization |
|------------------------|---|
| Regional Group / Tribe | "clusters of villages" (Kennedy 2000:3) |
| Village | "house clusters" (Barnett 1955:253) |
| Household | Bilateral Kinship options; flexible membership; "clusters of families" |
| Individual | "atomistic" (Mitchell 1992); strong "individualism" (Suttles 1987; Amoss 1978) |

It is my brothers and me against our cousins;
And it is our cousins, my brothers and me
against the world.

SUMMARY OF SOCIAL STRUCTURE

- Autonomy: Strong emphasis on individual & local group independence
- Heterarchical: Decentralized and networked relations
- Bottom-Up Organization: anchored in the local
